Description

Action is a complex phenomenon at the heart of human cognition. Progress in understanding action requires that we take an interdisciplinary approach integrating different perspectives from Philosophy, Psychology and Neuroscience.

The purpose of this summer school is to train a new generation of young philosophers and scientists of action with interdisciplinary skills. By bringing together leading proponents of the major theoretical perspectives on action in Philosophy, Psychology, and Neuroscience, it will provide students and junior researchers with an unparalleled opportunity to think across traditional disciplinary boundaries, and draw novel connections between theory and data.

Application Procedure

The Philosophy of Neuroscience Group at the University of Tuebingen, Germany (http://www.cin.uni-tuebingen.de/research/wong.php) in collaboration with the Forum Scientiarum at the University of Tuebingen invites advanced graduate students and junior researchers (no more than 5 years from having completed their PhD) from any of the mentioned fields and who are interested in interdisciplinary exchange to apply.

Application: Please send a CV and a 500-word letter expressing your interest in and intended contributions to the summer school. Please submit both the CV and the letter of interest as a single document (Word or PDF attachment). Note that there may be a poster session during the summer school. Please also indicate in your application whether you would be interested in presenting a poster, prepared prior to attending the summer school.

Deadline: The completed application is due by February 15th, 2015. A letter of admission will reach successful applicants within 7 days after the deadline. Applications should be sent to action.in.tuebingen@gmail.com.

Deadline for Application: 15 February 2015

Generously funded by:
The Institutional Strategy of the University of Tuebingen (Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft, ZUK 63) and the Werner Reichardt Centre for Integrative Neuroscience (CIN).
