

International Workshop:
Decolonizing Academia? Opportunities, Perspectives and Academic Responsibility

13th July 2019, 09:30-19:00 Uhr
Schloss Hohentübingen, Classical Archaeology, Room 165

Organised by Dr. Antony Pattathu, Prof. Dr. Gabriele Alex
Department of Social and Cultural Anthropology

While an end is attributed to colonization with the decades after the Second World War, the power relations created by colonialism and the accompanying racisms are partly still effective. The discussions about decolonization in general and in the context of the university in particular, which have gained more and more attention in recent years, address these problems and offer theoretical and practical possibilities for awareness and academic debate. This workshop offers space for discussions, cooperation and critical debates on the topic of "Decolonizing Academia".

How can the university, academia and society confront the topic of decolonization and continue to advance it, building on the numerous movements and approaches of recent decades, and what are the factors that prevent a broader recognition of the topic of decolonization in research and teaching? Among other things, the discussion is intended to address the spaces of identity politics, which are often associated with decolonial approaches and receive only limited attention in the German university landscape. The focus will be on the responsibility of the sciences towards colonial history. The way in which avoiding this responsibility represents a perpetuation of neocolonial power relations, through which the objectification of the other and the Global South is promoted, is a further question. Participation in the workshop is free of charge. Please register via the registration function on the Website of the Department.
