How should I address my professor in a mail?

1. No address necessary, just state your business: „Can you help me with the following question...?“
2. „Dear Prof. Y“
3. „Esteemed/Honoured Prof. Dr. Y“
4. „Hello Mr./Ms./Mx. Y“
5. „Hi!“
6. „To whom it may concern“

How should I address my professor in a mail?

1. No address necessary, just state your business: „I am writing because...“ – please don't, really. (It's very rude)
2. „Dear Prof. Y“ – most common form
3. „Esteemed/Honoured Prof. Dr. Y“ – very formal and sincere (can be used, but is used rarely)
4. „Hello Mr./Ms./Mx. Y“ – if you know them well (also applies to using their first name if you are on a first-name basis with them)
5. „Hi!“ – avoid (can be considered disrespectful)
6. „To whom it may concern“ – use only if you do not know them, and are looking for the right addressee

Academic Documents

„Prüfungsordnung“ (Examination regulations)

Examination regulations consist of a „general part“ („Allgemeiner Teil“/AT) and „special provisions“ („Besonderer Teil“/BT), both in separate PDF files. While the AT holds more general information, which often applies to more than one program or discipline of a specific faculty, the BT holds information pertaining to one single course of studies and is therefore often the more relevant part.

? Why are exam regulations important?

? Where can they be found?

Academic Documents

„Prüfungsordnung“ (Examination regulations)

Why are they important?

What can be found there, among other things, is:

- Deadlines, e.g. maximum duration of studies, if there is a limit (even without a limit, please remember that your student residence permit will run out eventually), and dates/deadlines for additional exams like intermediate or orientation exam.
- How to deal with failed exams, assignments, and theses
- How re-sits/repeat attempts are handled (including the maximum number of repeat attempts permitted)

Academic Documents

„Prüfungsordnung“ (Examination regulations)

What is not in the exam regulations?

Important information not contained in the exam regulations will usually be found in the module handbooks (MHBs).

This particularly applies to the in-depth description of a program's modules, including their exam and assignment types, credits and specific courses, but also to, e.g., model study plans and other, more content-oriented, program-specific information.

Academic Documents

„Prüfungsordnung“ (Examination regulations)

Where can they be found?

- ⇒ Usually, on the homepage of the exam office for your discipline:
  - Central Examination Office: <https://uni-tuebingen.de/en/120435>
  - Other examination offices: <https://uni-tuebingen.de/en/2074>
- ⇒ A link can also be found on your program's page of the list of degree programs: <https://uni-tuebingen.de/en/344>
(select your program via the drop-down or text input field)
- ⇒ Both locations will also hold/link to the module handbooks

Academic German

Getting to grips with German academic legalese:

„Verlust des Prüfungsanspruchs“

Academic German

„Verlust des Prüfungsanspruchs“

(or, for fans of German compound excesses: „Prüfungsanspruchsverlust“)

What it says (literal translation):

„Loss of the examination entitlement“

or:

„loss of the right to take an examination“

or:

„loss of the entitlement to take examinations“

or:

„loss of the right to be examined“...

or: ...

[tbc]

Academic German

„Verlust des Prüfungsanspruchs“

What it actually means (in a nutshell):

Prohibition to study further in this program and exclusion from the program for good.

Academic German

„Verlust des Prüfungsanspruchs“

What it means (background):

If you are enrolling in a program, with the enrollment you are granted an entitlement to take examinations in this program (module examination, oral exam, final thesis etc.).

Without the examinations, you cannot complete the program, therefore exams are vital to your study success.

In short: no exams = no degree.

Academic German

„Verlust des Prüfungsanspruchs“

What it means:

If you have failed a course, module or exam „too many“ times, i.e. more times than the maximum number specified in the exam regulations, you are not permitted to study in this program any longer. This is effected by your being deprived of (= losing) the entitlement to take an(y) examination in this program, which means that you can no longer complete it.

→ A „failure“ can also result from simply not meeting a deadline, or forgetting to de-register from an exam you cannot take, not only from not being able to successfully pass a test or assignment.

Academic German

„Verlust des Prüfungsanspruchs“

Further hints:

- Even if they may seem daunting, please go through the exam regulations early, and repeatedly in your studies, and familiarize yourself thoroughly with the parameters of your program specified there (deadlines, maximum repeat attempts, how to handle failed exams etc.).
- If the regulations are in German only and you cannot understand them, please contact your academic advisor
- If you think that you might be in danger of losing your entitlement to take examinations, Student Counseling is there to support you and inform you of possible actions: zsb@uni-tuebingen.de

Academic German

„Verlust des Prüfungsanspruchs“

Further information

- The loss of the entitlement to take an examination in a program usually applies to all universities in Germany, meaning that this specific program cannot be studied at a university anywhere in Germany any longer.
- You might still study this program in another country
- In some cases you might study the program in Germany at a university of applied sciences („Fachhochschule“), but not a „conventional“ university.
- You may be able to study a similar program in Germany (it is up to the university where you want to study to determine if the new program is „dissimilar enough“ for the loss of the entitlement to not apply there, too).
- Upon receiving notice of the loss, there might still be possible actions to be taken. This particularly applies if your responsibility for the loss is limited in some way (e.g. force majeure, illness)

Some Common Misconceptions about Student Counseling

Student Counseling is only for emergencies

Student Counseling is only for emergencies

Not at all. Student Counseling is offering support for all study situations and difficulties. This ranges from basic questions about study planning and organization (e.g. choosing courses in Alma), via formalities (explaining certain passages of exam regulations), and partly personal matters (as making contacts as an international student, or culture shock phenomena), up to exam preparation.

But our fields also encompass counseling for interpersonal problems (like conflicts with teachers or fellow students) or regarding learning strategies and techniques. Should you live with a chronic illness or disability, you can, moreover, find information and support concerning the accommodation for your special situation here, as well.

Finally, Student Counseling also acts as a kind of guide or roadmap and will refer you to further sources of support in- and outside the university, should the need arise.

Seeking counseling means I am lazy

Seeking counseling means I am lazy

Absolutely incorrect. First of all, as a student you are entitled to all the services UT offers. Nowhere in any regulations is it stipulated that a „hard-working“ student has to refrain from making use of those services, and no sensible teacher would ever demand this either. Moreover, getting counseling does not mean that someone „will do the work for you“; instead you might learn there about strategies or actions you can employ or take – which means that it is you who will have to do the „work“, in any case.

In general, Student Counseling provides resources for certain needs or issues many students commonly have. In this it can be considered similar to university sports, or the university IT Center. Would a student be considered lazy if they consulted the IT center about problems with their WiFi? Or rather clever, because they knew exactly where to turn to to efficiently solve the problem?

Only failures have to resort to counseling

Only failures have to resort to counseling

Going to counseling has nothing to do with failure or weakness. On the contrary, it takes enormous strength and determination to face difficulties in one's life or studies head-on, and act upon them in order to improve the situation.

Getting counseling is not „crying for help“, but consciously making use of a tool for a specific task or goal. Thus, it can be considered a form of self-empowerment, and sees many people coming out of predicaments stronger, having come to grips with their problems and thereby experienced true self-efficacy.

In addition, counseling is not only open for life-changing issues and situations, but also for more „trivial“ things like getting acquainted with the university's quirks, asking about specific academic procedures, and other comparably mundane things – which have nothing to do with failure, either.

The Counseling Service solves my problems

The Counseling Service solves my problems

If only... 😊

Student Counseling will do their best to support you in solving your problems, providing information and assistance wherever necessary and possible. In most cases, students will be able to find viable solutions themselves, although they might have to get into contact with several of the University's services during this process. And the experience of being able to get out of dire straits by one's own effort is just as valuable as academic education.
